

WHISKIES

Punjabi Club Rye Whisky

Punjabi Club Rye Whisky displays a golden straw color, and when the glass is tilted and twirled, stubborn legs forming, some of which refuse to drop back into the whisky.

The nose is full of clean oak and rye spice with obvious notes of fresh grain and straw accompanying the spice. As the glass sits, orange peel and citrus fruit notes begin to climb out of the glass as well as some fresh ginger and coriander spice. There is also a firm underlying sweetness which reminds one of cotton candy and marshmallows. The oak and grain scents seem to grow a little stronger.

Punjabi Club is a unique rye whisky. In your first sip you will taste the flavors of rye in the foreground surrounded by oak spices. In the background, but growing in intensity with each sip, is a sweet and sour fruitiness, which seems to be trying to overtake the hard rye and oak spice.

The flavors of rye in the foreground is surrounded by oak spices. In the background, but growing in intensity with each sip, is a sweet and sour fruitiness which seems to be trying to overtake the hard rye and oak spice (and does so after just a few sips). The fruit-like flavors have an exotic flair with bits of mango and grilled pineapple mixed in with orange and sour apple juice. There are sweet minty menthol-like undertones and a firm grassy (and spicy) tobacco lurking underneath. All of this makes for a very unique and interesting whisky.

The finish is spicy with an almost gin-like accent of pine and coriander combined with ginger rushing through the exit.
